Q: "Deutsche zu mir" vs "zum deutschen" I'm currently in Germany and want to say "Deutsche zu mir" to mean "Deutsche zu meiner Nähe" or "Deutsche zu mir". Is there a specific difference between "zu" and "zum", and which version is more likely to be used when? A: A good example where "zu" is appropriate is the expression "neu angefangen haben". Ein kleines Bildchen aus dem Ausschnitt deiner Armee schaut nach... A picture from your army's band worn on your arm makes you look... But there are places where "zum" makes no sense. Was wäre dein bevorzugtes Geschäft - zu einem ganz normalen Ort oder bei einer Kundschaft, deren Chef dir nicht zu gut begegnet? (This is the rule for the abbreviation "KD" - Kreditkarte - where you use "zu" instead of "zum". There you would say "zum ganz normalen Ort", where "zu" is appropriate because the bank card is "unbekannt" - unknown - not "normal".) Q: WPF ScrollViewer with IDictionary Not Updating I have a WPF desktop application that I am rendering some data in a ScrollViewer which I then export to PDF. Some of the data I am loading from a database which I populate in a Dictionary. The only way I can export the PDF and still have it updated as the data from the database changes is to wrap the dictionary up in an object that implements IDictionary. Since the dictionary is only 1 item in size I don't need to worry about the XmlDataProvider. `public class DataDictionary : IDictionary { public void Add(int key, Object value) { throw new NotImplementedException(); } public int Add(object`

Q: Checking if there is 3 cells in a row with the same value (python) I want to check if there is 3 cells in a row with the same value, and if so, print out the value of those 3 cells in a row. I know I can use count and range but I have no idea how to do this. Any help will be appreciated! A: You can use the following code: `import numpy as np a = np.array([[1,2,3],[1,1,1],[2,2,2]]) for i in range(a.shape[0]): for j in range(a.shape[1]): if a[i][j] == a[i][j-1] and a[i][j] == a[i][j-2]: print(a[i][j], a[i][j-1], a[i][j-2])` Q: How to restrict viewing and modifying only a key file in Git? I have a Git repo that is used for private work. I do not want it to be publicly viewable, I just want to allow access to a key file that is not part of the repo. How can I restrict only viewing and modifying access to the key file so that anyone that has access can't view or modify the rest of the repo? A: This is already implemented with Git's config option: `readonly = /dev/null` You can place the `readonly` key on a per-user basis using the `config/[user]/config` directory. See the Git documentation for more details. Q: Why can't we type into `chrome://extensions/`? I am using Ubuntu 11.10 with Google Chrome and Firefox. I have noticed that I am not able to type into either `chrome://extensions/` or `chrome://extensions/content/extensionB`, (unless I have an extension open on tab 1), any ideas? A: Chrome doesn't support inline editing of `url/extension` data (like in Google search results) in the extensions page. You can use the excellent `text-based extension manager/visualizer`,
