Some of you will be aware that, as of September 1st, I am no longer with the FT. My last day will be August 31st, and my last day at the FT will be September 5th. I have done this so that I can have more time to travel around Asia. And I will. And I have no desire to work in the UK or in Washington. In any case, I will continue to write posts on here, and I'm posting my new blog here, if you want to check it out! I will not be posting any updates to @FTCTravel, as I'm not going to be travelling. In the meantime, I plan on writing a book, publishing a cookbook, and spending more time with my family. There are a lot of questions I'm sure, and I appreciate your interest and time in reading this post. I'll get to them as quickly as I can. I'm posting this from a hotel in Hong Kong, where I'm doing a webinar this week in addition to preparing for my first "real" travel week, starting on September 7th. I also want to get some stuff done around the house, which is the least glamorous part of travelling. We have developed two new combinatorial peptide libraries, one of random poly-L-lysine-containing peptides, and another of random octa-arginine-containing peptides. Screening of the poly-lysine library showed that this can be used as a general replacement for epitope tags. Both libraries were screened and several important peptide sequences have been discovered. The octa-arginine library was found to be highly specific for alpha-helical structure. Both libraries were shown to be very useful in general screening for antisera. These libraries and antisera will be useful in determining the structure of carbohydrate reactive sites of the N-acetyllactosamine (Galbeta1-3GlcNAcbeta1-R) glycoproteins. There is a continuing need for new and more effective means to sterilize and/or disinfect surfaces, medical instruments
